Track Santa Some people simply can't wait 'til Christmas morning to Out if Santa gave them a visit. For those who are impatient, do not worry. You can keep tabs on the big guy by following North American Aerospace Defense Command, or NORAD, the site dedicated to Claus' coordinates. (Click here to visit the Santa Norad Tracks website) But the site is not just an advanced GPS. It also contains a Children's Countdown Village, which offers games, activities and other features for young people who are eager for Santa. The reason NORAD tracks Santa, according to its website, is: For more than 50 years, NORAD and its predecessor, continental Air Defense Command (CONAD) have been tracking Santa's flight. The tradition began in 1955 after a Colorado Springs-based Sears Roebuck & Co. ad for children called Santa Claus to print the wrong phone number. Instead of going to Santa, the phone number takes the children through the activities of the CONAD Commander-in-Chief hotline. The campaign director at the time, Colonel Harry Shoup, had his staff check the radar for signs that Santa was heading south from the Arctic. In 1958, the Governments of Canada and the United States established a two-nation air defense command for North America known as the North American Aerospace Defense Command, also known as NORAD, which then received the tradition of monitoring Santa.Since that time, NORAD's men, women, family and friends have volunteered their time to respond to meetings. phone calls and emails from children around the world. Also, we now track Santa using the Internet. Millions of people wanting to know Santa's whereer now visit the NORAD Tracks Santa website. Finally, media from around the world rely on NORAD as a reliable source to provide updates on Santa's journey.
